

Indiana has listened to voters and established a sensible and practical law for telephone privacy. I pay for my phone for my use, I'd rather spend my time with family rather than unsolicited tehephone calls. If business (CBA) pads others pockets and manages to get this changed it is a big mistake and the there will be public pressure. The existing law is good for families and hard working people who deserve to enjoy their free time without being harrassed constantly by unwanted phone calls. The Indiana telephone privacy law is great for the citizens of Indiana and should not be changed
